CEU from CDR – pending

Join us to discuss the increasingly important role of dietitians in the evolving landscape of diabetes and obesity care. Led by experts Patricia Davidson and Beth Czerwony, they'll review the coexisting mechanisms between these conditions and the necessary dietary interventions to complement and manage the side effects of GLP-1s and other medications. Leave feeling empowered to initiate an interdisciplinary approach to nutrition management while advocating for patient-centered care.

About the speakers:

Patricia Davidson DCN, RDN, LDN, CDCES, FAND, CHSE, FADCES is a Professor of Nutrition at West Chester University-PA. Tricia has held clinical positions as a registered dietitian and certified diabetes care and education specialist for both in and outpatient diabetes education. For over thirty years, Tricia has been active in the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics on various committees and task forces, including the development of practice guidelines, Chair of the Diabetes Dietetic Practice Group. She serves on the Association of Diabetes Care and Education Specialists Board of Directors. Striving to be on top of emerging, evidence-based practices (EBP), both clinically and in teaching, her research centers on diabetes care and technology and pedagogical approaches for enhancing student learning.

Beth Czerwony MS, RD, CSOWM, LD is a Clinical Registered Dietitian with the Cleveland Clinic's Center for Human Nutrition since 2007. In 2019, Beth earned her Certification in Obesity and Weight Management and serves as a preceptor for dietetic interns and mentors both ASMBs and Weight Management DPG. She is member of the Weight Management DPG for the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics, American Society of Metabolic and Bariatric Surgery, and The Obesity Society. Outside of the clinical setting, Beth has completed multiple local and national presentations and media interviews.
